The Meadow Wood Ranch Conservation Easement held by Johnson County will soon be transferred to and overseen by the Wyoming Stockgrowers Land Trust if the last few pieces of the puzzle fall into place, according to County Deputy Attorney Barry Crago, who updated the county commissioners on the issue at their meeting this week.

The process has taken more than a year to get the inventory of the property done, and get the changes made to the documents to satisfy the county and the Stockgrowers Land Trust.

Crago said he was satisfied with the recent changes to the documents made by the Land Trust that were sent to the county for their approval. ▶

The Wyoming Stockgrowers Land Trust Endowment will receive an as-yet undetermined sum of money from the county as a transfer fee and contribution with the transfer of the easement, which is typical with these types of transactions.
